

STARRY NIGHT

By Fatima

It was a long day at school. Kelly and Jenny were glaring at each other across the room. Then the bell rang. Then they all went home. When Kelly went home she saw something on her bed. She was confused, because she didn't know why there would be a letter in her room. She opened the letter, and it said, "Dear Kelly, there is something I want to show you back in Ohio. Some things have changed since your grandpa passed away. Your cousins have been talking to nobody. And your uncle has seen red balloons floating down stairs at night. Ask your mom to come back. From, Nobody." Kelly was curious about this letter. "And how did that person know my grandpa died?" Kelly ran to her mom. After two weeks Kelly and her mom were at the airport. The women were telling us to line up to go to the airplane. After two hours we landed. Uncle Duey picked us up at the airport. Kelly's mom's phone rang. Her mom had to go to New York, so her mom left. Kelly's grandma Lu said, "No going to the corn fields." Kelly was playing with a ball. It went into the cornfield. Kelly went to get it. And when she turned around, a red balloon was behind her. When she went to bed, she imagined these people playing outside. She wanted to discover why that letter was written. She sneaked outside of the house. She went even far in the cornfield. She saw this little girl. She said, "Can you play with me?" Kelly ran. Kelly was found in a cemetery. In her head everything started to melt. Kelly was never found.

Last week, my husband, George, and I moved from the city of Chicago to a secluded farm. Little did we know, we weren't the only ones in the house. George and I would wake up to creepy noises like crashing coming from the kitchen, steps on the stairs, doors opening and closing.

Looking at our picture, we noticed we weren't the only ones. The curtain was slightly open, and all we saw was a head.

The next day, we went back to Chicago but we were followed. We just wanted to be left alone and let the spirits be in their house and be happy. George and I were really scared because they didn't leave us alone. One day I thought they left forever, but one of the spirits was in George's body, so I called an exorcist so they could help George.

The exorcist helped George, but I noticed that the spirits weren't gone. We were really scared. When I went to the attic I saw a frame that was at the farm and I asked George if he brought it to the house and he said that he didn't. We told the exorcist what to do, and they told us to go and put it back in the house and to put holy water around the house.

It was Halloween in 1831. A group of three friends were going on a road trip to Texas. Half way to Texas their car broke down. Then an old man who claimed to help them fix their problem said, "Come to my house. My wife is making dinner." Then the teenagers all said, "OK." After a few minutes they came upon an old house. Mrs. Smith was waiting. When Mr. Smith arrived, he said, "We have guests at our home." Mrs. Smith replied, "Oh, guests. I rarely have guests. Here, come enter, children." Once they enter, the door locked. They were all scared. Then Mr. and Mrs. Smith both were murderers. The story is that they pick up random people and kill them. The doors locked. Mrs. Smith with a knife slaughtered Bobby's throat. The teens screamed, and Scarlet said, "Let's get out of here!" Mr. Smith grabbed Johnny and stuck a pitchfork through his body. Then Mrs. Smith knocked out Scarlet to put her in the basement. Next morning the sheriff came to wonder if they had seen anybody that has a broken down car. Mrs. Smith said, "No." Lucky Scarlet woke up and yelled. The sheriff without a doubt went in and through the basement without noticing Mr. Smith waiting for him. As the sheriff opened the door, he was killed with a pitchfork. Then Mr. and Mrs. Smith told Scarlet she is never leaving the house, never again.

"Honey!" Mr. G. said. "I'm going to see the barn! We can probably use it for storage!"

"Okay! Be careful!" Mrs. G. called after him.

Mr. G. walked over to the big creeky, red barn. Crrreeek... The door opened...
But Mr. G didn't open it!

Nancy and Dave lived in the woods where there were plants and trees covering their house. Then they died because they were walking in the woods, and they didn't look down, and they fell into a hole of knives. Now they became ghosts and they haunted people and they would say, "Get away! Stay out of my house." At night time they would play people's piano and play with the people who were sleeping. Nancy and David would stop haunting people if they do what they do!!!

A boy named Rick and a group of friends were destroying Farmer John's crops. He came out of the house waving a pitchfork, so Rick and his friends yelled back and threw a rock and ran off.

Three days later Rick and his friends came back and threw marbles to break the windows. All the front windows were broken and Mary was screaming because she got hit in the head. The boys run away from the house and see a pick-up truck. The neighbor came up and asked John, "What's all that racket?"

"Those doggone kids."

"Hope you catch them."

The neighbor leaves and John went and snuck into the field. John maims the two boys with the pitchfork and drags Rick into the attic where he was tied up. That's where he is to this day.

Once, in a haunted barn, there was a ghost farmer by the door of the barn. Then, Mr. and Mrs. Gothic moved into the house next door. They realized there was a barn outside.

"Honey!" Mr. G. said. "I'm going to see the barn! We can probably use it for storage!"

"Okay! Be careful!" Mrs. G. called after him.

Mr. G. walked over to the big creeky, red barn. Crrreeek... The door opened...
But Mr. G didn't open it!

PERSISTENCE OF MEMORY

“Sweetie, time for breakfast.”

“Coming, mom.”

“Finish your food before school.”

“Okay, mom.”

First day of school. Can’t wait to get there.

Hi. My name is Billy and I am 16 years old. I like to play baseball and volleyball. I like math, science, and social world. I’m just happy that I’m not sleepy, yet hopefully I don’t sleep in social world.

As the teacher talked I looked at the clock. The next thing I know, I’m in the middle of a desert alone. I look around just to see if I was dreaming, but it looked like I wasn’t. I walked around and all I saw was the sun burning all my skin. I think I stepped on a roach, but it was not a roach. It was a snake. I ran away just not to get bit. I dig with my hands just to find water, but nothing. I looked up. The sun was twitching my eyes. Then I look down and see fire coming towards me. I ran as far as I could, but I was too weak, and I stopped.. The fire got closer and closer. I just fell to the sand, thinking about my mom and how much I will miss her once the fire touched me. The teacher woke me up all of a sudden---she saved my life.

One day on a cold, foggy night, a boy named Jeffery went to a haunted house in the forest. He is 12 years old, and he is easily frightened. He walked in the house and he had to decide whether he would stay inside or run out! He wanted to stay inside the house. He saw scary pictures, goo coming out of the ceiling. He almost thought it was blood. His body was shaking! He began to walk up the stairs. The stairs began to melt! He fell through. He said, “Ahhhhh!!!”

He was knocked out because of the fall. In his dreams he saw clocks that were melting away. He woke up. That dream caught his attention. He realized that he had to get out of the haunted house before his time was up.

By Jennifer R. and her tutor Fred the melting horse had no head. He went to Narnia to find his head and found some melting clocks. The clocks were all the same time. The trees were all dead and a weird cracked mountain was behind them. There was a melting clock behind the horse and he jumped on Fred's back. This caused Fred to fall onto the ground and start to melt. Then a breeze came and picked up Fred and flew him home with his head. He lived happy ever after with his head and friend Joe, the melting clock.
